UGA SBDC helps Dublin entrepreneurs turn passion for barbeque into a thriving business

When Gary and Dionn Lanton first fired up the smoker in their backyard, they never imagined their passion for barbecue would lead to two thriving restaurants and national recognition. But with the right mix of talent, determination, and strategic support from the University of Georgia Small Business Development Center (UGA SBDC), that's exactly what happened.

Today, the Lantons operate Holy Smokes BBQ in Dublin, Georgia—a restaurant known for its outstanding customer service and award-winning meats.

Their culinary achievements include being named Georgia Barbecue Association Team of the Year in 2011, winning on the reality TV series "BBQ Pitmasters" in 2012, and earning the title of "Best Ribs in Georgia" from the Food Network. Their barbecue even drew Hollywood attention when actor Jeff Goldblum made a surprise visit in 2023.

"We knew we could cook great barbecue," said Gary Lanton. "But we also knew that cooking was only a small part of running a restaurant. That's where the UGA SBDC helped us."
