Rally Point Grille: Serving veterans, first responders and community with support from the UGA SBDC

U.S. Marine veterans Ralph and Carrie Roeger wanted to create more than just a restaurant—they dreamed of a gathering place that honored the service and sacrifice of America’s veterans and first responders. That vision became Rally Point Grille, a thriving bar and grill in Woodstock, Georgia, where stories are shared, memories are honored and the community comes together.

From the very beginning, the University of Georgia Small Business Development Center .

(UGA SBDC) has been a part of their journey. With guidance from consultants and access to capital, the Roegers transformed their idea into a successful business that continues to grow and make an impact.

““When you walk inside, it’s like a Marine museum. Everyone made us feel welcome right away. We kept talking about that experience throughout our trip and thought, ‘There’s nothing like this near us. We should do it,’” said Carrie Roeger.
