HOW SAFE SHOPPING PROTECTS OUR FAMILIES AND COMMUNITIES

U.S. Customs and Border Protection and the Chamber share expertise on the dangers of counterfeit goods and how to keep communities safe from illicit trade.

Families across the country are welcoming the new school year. Whether it's crayons and glue, the latest laptop, or a new pair of sneakers, families will buy a range of goods as the school bell rings and students return to campus. This means it's never been more important for parents to be aware of the risks of purchasing counterfeit goods. While they may appear less expensive, fakes pose serious health and safety risks to our students, meaning families pay twice: Once with their wallets and again with their well-being.

How Grandma's Cookie Recipe Turned Into A Thriving Business

In December 2015, Jonny Womack was in midst of a career change – having just returned to school to become a registered nurse after working as a pharmaceutical sales representative. Over the years, he had earned a reputation for bringing unique homemade cookies during his sales visits.

“Right around Christmas, I had three different doctors’ offices call me in one week to see if I was still making cookies,” said Womack. “I told them yes, but when I asked the first office how many they would need, they said 30 dozen. I, of course, said yes. But in the back of my mind, I had no idea how I was going to do this. But I knew I could.”

Jonny and Hannah, his wife and business partner, borrowed every KitchenAid mixer they could get their hands on and baked for hours out of their home. The scents of their Banana Puddin’, Maple Bacon Bourbon, Jalapeno Corn and Peanut Butter Banana cookies wafted across their house as they baked around the clock to fill the orders by deadline.

Womack knew his heart wasn’t in nursing school and his passion was cookies. The Christmas orders confirmed they had something special, and it was time to get into the cookie business.

Time Management vs Energy Management

Many of us are all too aware of time management. It seems that there just aren't enough hours in the day and, as such, we feel the considerable need to make the most of the time we have.

There's nothing wrong with that in theory. It's commendable to want to make the most from our day and to achieve as much as possible. The issue, however, is that in many cases, we overlook something that is arguably even more important: energy management.
